THE SEMESTER'S RHYTHM

The autumn breeze brings fresh design,
New notebooks waiting for a line.
With eager steps we crowd the hall,
Before the heavy shadows fall;
A world of hope, a campus bright,
We chase the morning's golden light.

But winter settles, cold and deep,
While coffee fights the need for sleep.
The open books, the mounting stress,
The midnight hours of weariness.
We count the days and share the strain,
And find our strength inside the rain.

Then, spring arrives with sudden grace,
To mock the panic in our pace.
For finals loom beneath the sun,
The hardest race has just begun;
With racing hearts and tired eyes,
We reach for where the answer lies.

The final bell, the papers clear,
A sudden quiet fills the year.
The heavy pressure slips away,
To meet the warmth of summer's day.
The campus rests, the mind set free,
We close the book on what used to be.

GRATITUDE

What are we satisfied with—
the life God has given us,
or the dreams we could not achieve?

What are we satisfied with—the shelter God has blessed us with,
or the longing for a grand bungalow?

What are we satisfied with—
the life partner beside us,
or the desire to live someone else's life?

What are we satisfied with—
the work we do each day,
or the position and success of another?

What are we satisfied with—
the countless blessings God has showered upon us,
or the endless pursuit of more and more?

What are we satisfied with—
the appreciation we receive,
or the applause and admiration given to others?

What are we satisfied with—
passing the buck,
or taking responsibility with courage and commitment?

What are we satisfied with—
the precious gift of having our loved ones with us,
and the grace of being spared through difficult times?

What are we satisfied with—
the love that fills our hearts,
or the constant craving for something more?

Let us be grateful for every breath we take,
for every moment is a gift from God.

Let us count our blessings rather than our shortcomings, and cherish what we have instead of longing for what we lack.

For satisfaction begins where gratitude grows,
and a grateful heart finds joy in every blessing
God bestows.

DIABETES: A SILENT CHALLENGE

Diabetes is one of the most common health conditions affecting people across the world. It occurs when the body does not produce enough insulin or is unable to use it effectively. Insulin, a hormone secreted by the Islets of Langerhans in the pancreas, helps transport glucose from the bloodstream into the body's cells for energy. When this process is disrupted, glucose accumulates in the blood, which can eventually damage the eyes, kidneys, nerves, and heart.

Common symptoms of diabetes include frequent urination, excessive thirst, extreme hunger, unexplained weight loss, irritability, blurred vision, poor wound healing, bad breath, and dry mouth. The condition may develop due to hereditary factors, a sedentary lifestyle, obesity, and other related causes.

Diabetes is classified into several types, including Type 1 Diabetes, Type 2 Diabetes, Prediabetes, Gestational Diabetes, Secondary Diabetes, and the rare Neonatal Diabetes. Prediabetes refers to blood sugar levels that are higher than normal but not high enough to be diagnosed as diabetes, while gestational diabetes develops during pregnancy and usually disappears after childbirth.

Many people successfully avoid the long-term complications of diabetes through proper self-care, while others who neglect the condition may become vulnerable to serious health issues. Therefore, awareness and timely intervention are essential.

Managing diabetes requires a healthy lifestyle and regular medical supervision. A balanced diet rich in fruits, vegetables, whole grains, and low-fat foods, along with reduced salt and fat intake, plays a crucial role in controlling blood sugar levels. Regular physical activity for at least 30 minutes on most days of the week is strongly recommended. Beneficial exercises include walking, running, cycling, dancing, swimming, High-Intensity Interval Training (HIIT), weight training, and yoga.

Individuals with diabetes should also take medications as prescribed, monitor blood glucose levels regularly, maintain good oral hygiene, inspect their feet daily for cuts or sores, and avoid smoking. With increased awareness, healthy lifestyle choices, and proper medical care, diabetes can be effectively controlled, enabling individuals to lead healthy and productive lives.

MANAGING STRESS DURING EXAMS

Examinations are a significant aspect of every student's educational journey. They offer an opportunity to demonstrate knowledge, skills, and understanding gained throughout the academic year. However, exams are often accompanied by feelings of stress and anxiety. While a moderate amount of stress can motivate students to perform better, excessive stress may affect concentration, memory, and overall well-being. Therefore, learning to manage exam-related stress is essential for both academic achievement and mental health.

One of the most effective strategies for reducing exam stress is proper preparation. Developing a realistic study timetable helps students manage their time efficiently and prevents the pressure of last-minute cramming. Equally important is maintaining a healthy lifestyle during examination periods. Adequate sleep enhances memory retention and cognitive functioning, while a nutritious diet provides the energy needed for productive study sessions. Regular physical activity, even in the form of a brief walk or light exercise, can help relieve stress and improve mood. Drinking sufficient water and avoiding excessive caffeine intake can further support focus and alertness.

Taking regular breaks during study sessions is also beneficial. Continuous studying without rest can lead to mental exhaustion and reduced productivity. In addition, cultivating a positive mindset can greatly reduce exam anxiety. Rather than dwelling on fears and uncertainties, students should focus on their preparation, achievements, and strengths. Relaxation techniques such as deep breathing exercises, meditation, and mindfulness practices can help calm the mind and maintain emotional stability.

Individuals with diabetes should also take medications as prescribed, monitor blood glucose levels regularly, maintain good oral hygiene, inspect their feet daily for cuts or sores, and avoid smoking. With increased awareness, healthy lifestyle choices, and proper medical care, diabetes can be effectively controlled, enabling individuals to lead healthy and productive lives.

In conclusion, although examinations are an unavoidable part of student life, they need not become a source of overwhelming stress. Through effective planning, healthy habits, positive thinking, and seeking support when necessary, students can successfully manage exam stress and perform to the best of their abilities.

The pressure to prove that motherhood won't affect performance is real, and it's exhausting.

Maternity leave itself is rarely rest because a woman goes through so much which she can't explain to anyone both physically and mentally but true love and care for the little one. With this she starts thinking about her career growth as she has stepped away from her job for this break.

Recovery from maternity takes years, but family and society sees and cares only for the child, not the mother. Returning to work is the real and emotional challenge to the mother as she leaves her child at home, mentally stressed and as she goes through sleepless nights; but as morning strikes, there she is with a smile on her face.

This is not a personal failing of a woman but it's a great strength of every working mother. Workplaces should encourage every working mother to build her career and grow so that they retain the talented women.

Maternity and working women are the greatest treasures of families and workplaces, so its time we respect them, retain them and honour them.

WORKING WOMAN & MATERNITY: MORE THAN JUST LEAVE

For working women, maternity is not a pause from life — it's a balancing act with no manual.

From the moment a pregnancy begins, a second job starts for a woman navigating office perceptions, managing fatigue through meetings, while deadlines don't move.

THE WORLD RIGHT NOW

Have you ever watched the news and thought, "What is happening to our world?" Every day, we hear about wars, rising prices, crime, pollution, and many other problems. Though the world has become more advanced, it is losing peace, kindness, and unity.

One thing that is worrisome is the lack of humanity among us. We are connected through phones and social media, but are we truly connected as people? We are so busy with our own lives that we forget to care about others. Simple things like helping someone, being kind, or listening to a person in need can make a big difference, yet these acts are becoming less common.

Animals are also suffering because of human activities. Trees are being cut down, forests are disappearing, and animals are losing their homes, being abandoned, getting injured, even killed. Have we ever thought about how our actions affect the animals that share this planet with us?

Women's safety is another important issue. Even today, women and girls do not feel completely safe in public places. Everyone deserves to live without fear and with equal respect. A good society is one where every person feels safe and valued.

Further, the world is currently facing many wars and conflicts. Instead of solving problems peacefully, people and countries often choose violence and hatred. Wars destroy homes, separate families, and take away innocent lives. Can there be true happiness and progress without peace?

Another challenge is inflation. The prices of food, fuel, education, and daily needs are skyrocketing. Many families find it difficult to manage their expenses. Meanwhile, corruption among some leaders makes people lose trust in those who are supposed to work for the welfare of society.

Because of all these challenges, our future looks bleak. Some even wonder if bringing a child into this world is the right decision. We are concerned about the kind of world the future generations will inherit. Whether people agree or disagree with this idea, it shows how dismal the current state of the world is.

But should we lose hope? Definitely not. Change starts with each one of us. We can be kinder, help others, respect women, care for animals, protect nature, and stand against wrong actions. Even small, good deeds can inspire others and create a positive impact.

The world right now has many problems, but it also has people who want to make it better. As Michael Jackson said, "Heal the world, make it a better place for you and for me and the entire human race."

If each of us starts with one small act today, imagine what our generation can build for tomorrow.

AI - BOON OR BANE?

Over the last few years, a surge has been seen in understanding and learning AI. Why is this so?

AI has become a pivotal component of modern society, influencing every aspect of life.

AI as a Boon:

AI enhances efficiency in business operations by reducing repetitive tasks, streamlining operations, reducing costs, and increasing productivity. Its tools have benefited the domains of healthcare, R&D, and various e-commerce platforms. It provides a simplified user experience that creates a paradigm shift in consumerism and the daily lives of individuals.

AI as a Bane:

As machines become capable of performing various tasks, this technological displacement raises questions about the future of human work. There is a need for comprehensive retraining programmes to equip workers with new skills. There is also a growing concern about the erosion of critical thinking and problem-solving skills. These factors make AI appear as a bane.

To conclude:

A balanced approach is required to enhance efficiency while prioritizing responsible AI development to create a future that is inclusive, equitable, and sustainable.
